Hamibal Hamin affords a vivid idea of the simple mode of life usual with the future Vice-President of the United States:

"Having had business to call me to this city, I thought I would ride d wn the river to Hamden (about live miles), and purchase a cargo of tannin for a contomer (a Quaker), and at the same time call upon my old friend, Hamlin. After knocking at his plain and comfortable residence, a fine-looking specimen of a farmer's daughter came to the door; and, said I, 'Is Senator Hamlin at home?' The answer was, 'He is: but not is the house at this time. Yankee fashion, says I, 'Where is he?' Down in the field, was the reply. 'Show me the way,' said I. No scooper said than done, and there I found our distinguished friend at work. Himself and son, a fine-looking young man, were guthering pumpkins. You, no doubt, have often heard of Yankee pumpkin pies, and doubtless eaten them too. These were grown agaid a field of corn which, we are sorry to say, is rather light this year, in Maine especially. He has no other help, and while a fine little farm of only ten acres of tillage land, he told me he yearly raised more than sufficient for all his use, and for ten years had always had corn left over to sell, from ten to twenty bushels; but this year, he thought he should not. He had his family horse (a good one) in a common farm wagoa, just drawing the last load of pumpkins. All his harvesting is done, except the corn. He had a lame back that day, from the effects of carrying his wheat up stairs to his granary; it was all cleaned up, and looked linely. He has his ground plewed and subsoiled, together with a large manner heap, in good shape, made from the waste earth and mark, some other acditions, with a few casks of lime added. He has his cranberry bed, and all the small fixings such as good poultry yard, fine togs, &c., while for dinner every article upon the table was grown upon this snug httle farm."

"There will be a great change in the returns."

following:

"There will be a great change in the returns from Egypt at the coming elections, both State and National. An intelligent farmer of Williamson Co. conversing with one of his friends in Jackson Co., said there would be 300 Republican votes given in Williamson, where but 5 were given in 1856. The Jackson to the said boxes and the 250 years given in that co. man said there would be 250 vores given in that county for Lincoln and Hamlin. These men are not politicians. Intelligent men estimate the change in Egypt at thousands, and there can be no doubt that there were thousands in Northern Illinois who refused to yote in 1858, who will now give their suffrages to Lincoln. There can be no doubt, that as between Lincoln and Douglas, Illinois is as for Lincoln as -The Hon. Schnyler Colfax wrote a letter to the Republicans of the District he represents, and which be will continue to represent, as he has been reneminated. In this letter he reviews the proceedings of Congress, showing that the Republicans in that body have been faithful to their pledges. Of Mr. Lincoln, he speaks in the following eloquent language:

he speaks in the following eloquent languages:

"However men may differ as to political principles, no one in this broad land, from the most gifted Senator to the bitterest partisan, has even whispered the slight est doubt of the unbending integrity and inflexible honesty of Abraham Lincoln. And a happy era, indeed, will be inaugurated when a President sits in our White House, who, unlike the present incumbent, will neither fear nor protest against Congress investigating the official consuct of his Administration, but will, on the contrary arraed with conscious rectitude, challenge and invite the severest scrutiny of friend or foe. In other respects, too, the choice of the Chicago Convention seems singularly fortunate. Reared amid all the disadvantages of orphanage and poverty, without the benefit of classical or collegiate education, and with only such attainments as could be acquired during the sern toils of frontier life, our gallant standard-bearer has so cultivated, in maturer years, his native intellect, that he stands before the American people now, a giant seen tons of roather life, our gainant standard-bearer has so cultivated, in maturer years, his native intellect, that he stands before the American people now, a giant in intellect as he is in stature, and one of the best and truest representatives of the self-ande mon of the Republic. Nor is this all. His election will prove that, under our institutions, the Presidency is not more accessible to the child of wealth, of culture and of distinction, than to the poor farm-boy of the Western prairies—and that here, if nowhere else in the wide world, is merit the true test of distinction and fame. Elected, as he undoubtedly will be, flunkeyism and aristocracy will be banished from the White House, I trust not only for his term, but forever thereafter; and the People's President, himself, both the child and the champion of free labor, will welcome there with the hearty greetings of an honest heart the humble piouser of the distant West as cordially as if he stood before him glittering with the stars and jewels that adors the most talented and distinguished diplomatists from abroad. To attain such a desirable result as this, and to restore the Government to the principles of its founders, let us all labor, zealously and heartily, and patriotically; feeling, as has been well said by another, that With the feels of Abraham and the courses of Hamilal, we ing as has been well said by another, that With the faith of Abraham, and the courage of Hannibal, we sha'l surely conquer the Wrong and maintain the Democrat writes on the 16th inst. as follows: Democrat writes on the 16th inst. as Iodows:

"Mr. Lincoln is remaining quietly at home in this city, or, to correct the expression, he is at home, and is as quiet as is compatible with the rush of visitors from all sections to see the chosen leader of the Republican Losts. He occupies, during the large share of his time, the Executive apartments at the State-House, on the second floor, and some days receives hundreds of vis-itors, while the mails and the telegraph put him in com-munication with a vastly larger number throughout all manication with a vasify larger number or agrows sections of the country. Fortunately, the mails demand prepayment, and the telegraph offices will, at most, send but a few of their expensive favors without collecting their tariff at the outer end of the wire. This rush, therefore, entails nothing upon the recipient but a pressure upon his time. The writer called upon Mr. Livedly worked any in commany with several entitlemen a pressure upon his time. The writer cancel upon Mr. Lincoln yesterday in company with several gentlemen from Massachusetts. Old Abe was giving a final sitting to Hicks of New-York for a portrait in oil, which is deemed here a success. It is on the order of New-York Republicans, and will do service in the campaign. Mr. Lincoln, in high good hu nor, refers to the research that has been quing on about him, not the pressure that has been going on about him, not-withstanding some of it has been carried on to an ex-tent but little removed from annoyance, such has been the zeal of biographers, and photographers, and artists with crayor and pencil, writing and sketching and diving deep down into every opening in quest of points and facts.

- The Washington Constitution thus retracts one

—The Washington Constitution thus retracts one of its slanderous attacks on Mr. Lincoln:

"We can honestly say that we are glad the friends of Mr. Lincoln have taken the pains to cause that gentleman's stationery account, as member of Congress, to be examined, with a view to scertain whether the scandal concerning his having had several pairs of boots charged to that account and of course paid for our of the public finade, was or was not well founded. We published the allegation to that effect from The Louisville Courier, with the simultaneous expression of a hope that some one would investigate it since, triting as the circumstance might seem to many, we thought that, if true, it indicated such a disgracefully love estimate on the part of Mr. Lincoln of the dulies and responsibilities of a representative, and of the principles of hours and honesty, that it ought to be known to the people who are now asked to elevate him to the highest office in the nation; and if matrix, we, knowing that such weapons desired to see the charge full into disner. We frankly say that the officer of the House of Representatives, having in charge the stationary account, has certified thrench the new squerys that the records of his office furnish no evidence of any transaction like that laid to Mr. Lincoln's charge."

E-The discussion on the Savoy and Nice bill in the Sardinian Chamber of Depaties was marked by a curious incident in the sitting of the 28th ult. The Abbe Anelti rose to read a speech which contained expression of such virulent batred to France and the framers of the treaty, that loud murmurs broke out from every part of the Chamber. As the business before the House was thus uselessly interrupted, the President having called the Abbe to order several times, at length consulted the House on the question as to whether he should be allowed to continue or not. The Chamber, by an overwhelming majority, replied in the negative, and the Abbe was obliged to sit down again. This is the first time a member has been allenced by a vote of the Chamber,
